National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers of rain, sleet and snow are expected on Thursday night before largely dying out on Friday morning. The extent of ice will vary across the area with inland areas most prone whilst coastal areas exposed to the northerly winds are less likely to be affected. 1 or 2 cm of snow may accumulate above about 100 m.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 28th Dec 2017 until 12:00 on Fri, 29th Dec 2017

Icy patches are expected to develop on Thursday night and Friday morning on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths, as well as where showers continue to fall washing off treatment. Some injuries from slips and falls on icy surfaces are possible.
